

Arts for Learning (A4L) makes learning come alive by taking the arts out of isolation and into reading, social studies, science and math. Educators, parents and students agree – A4L engages students in ways that have a positive impact on student academic and social achievement.

Research indicates the arts teach – not just how to read and write, but how to think creatively, how to be independent as well as collaborative and how to make connections between seemingly unrelated topics.

You can help more kids make the connection!
